Fire at Penobscot.

PENOBSCOT, April 5 (special).—The house, stable and outbuildings of Mrs. Lenora Thompson, of this place, were burned at 7 o'clock this morning.

The fire is attributed to a defective chimney. It started in the attic, and the whole upper part of the house was in flames when the fire was discovered. It is believed the fire may have been smouldering all night.

The houses of William B. Clement and Mrs. Annie Davis, adjoining the Thompson house, caught fire, but were saved without damage.

Most of the contents of the house and stable were saved. The loss is estimated at $1,500; insurance, $400.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week
Beginning April 10, 1910.

Topic.—God is here.—Ps. cxxxix, 1-2.
Comment by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle,
D. D.

A knowledge of the writings and especially the poetical writings of the world is a part of a liberal education. It is necessary to the cultivated mind. But when it comes to religious poetry to be ignorant of the Psalms, the greatest religious poems, is not compensated by a knowledge of Dante, Milton, Tennyson and Browning. In loftiness of thought and in expressive beauty of language we find nowhere outside of this psalm the great attributes of God—His omniscience, His omnipresence, His omnipotence—so strikingly set forth. It is not surprising that this magnificent psalm should be pronounced "the crown of the Psalms." The omniscience of God is described in the first six verses, His omnipresence from the seventh to the twelfth verses, and after a denunciation of the wicked (13-18) as the result of meditation upon the Holy God His omnipotence is described in the nineteenth to the twenty-second verse, and the psalm closes with a prayer for God's teaching and leading:

Search me, O God, and know my heart:
Try me and know my thoughts,
And see if there be any wicked way in me.

And lead me in the way everlasting.
One striking feature of this psalm which is a meditation upon the great attributes of God is its individual application. The psalmist speaks not of the greatest attributes of God as related to the people of the world or to the universe in which we live, but as related to himself alone. "Thou hast searched me and known me," etc., God's full knowledge of Himself; "Whither shall I go from thy Spirit," etc., God everywhere present to him; "I am fearfully and wonderfully made," his omnipotence as applied to his own creation, to which he adds, "Wonderful are thy works, and my soul knoweth (it) right well." This characteristic of this psalm could be applied with great force today. Men think too much of their own greatness and not enough of God's. Moreover, meditation upon the supreme attributes of God will lead us to see our own insignificance, our own weakness and the absolute need of His perfect knowledge about us, His constant presence with us, His almighty power to keep us. Since there is one who knows all things, who is everywhere, no matter where we may be, who has all power to keep us at all times and in all places, we should not try to tread the pathway of life alone, but put our life in His care and sovereign keeping.

That God possesses the attributes which the psalmist ascribes to Him is not to be doubted.

1. God knows all things. This the psalmist learned by experience. (a) He knows our thoughts. "O Lord, Thou hast searched me and knowest me. Thou understandest my thoughts afar off." No matter how far we may be separated from God, He knows our thoughts, for in His omniscience "He has searched us." (b) God knows our words, "for before we say a word, Thou knowest it altogether." Before we speak God knows what we shall speak. (c) He knows our ways. "Thou art acquainted with all my ways." He is omniscient, knowing thoughts, words and deeds. This fact should lead us to guard our thoughts, speak only well with our tongues and do only what He would have us do.

2. God is here, everywhere. How strikingly the past sets forth the omnipresence of God. In heaven he can say, "God is here," in hell, "God is here," in any part of the earth, "God is here," in light or darkness, "God is here," for light and darkness are all alike to God. To Him night is as light as day. No one can hide himself from God, and no one need try it. Adam tried it, but failed. Jonah had enough in trying to run away from God. The only way to flee from God is to flee to Him in Jesus Christ.

3. God is omnipotent, all powerful. This omnipotence is illustrated in our creation and in all His works—wonderful or marvelous are the works. We need search God far more than He needs us. Let us therefore seek Him in Christ and find safety beneath His wings.

Martin Luther when once asked by his friends what his plans for the following day were answered: "Work, work, from early until late. In fact, I have so much to do that I shall spend the first three hours in prayer." A "model Endeavorer" will pray.

"There are two little words in our language which I've always admired," said John Williams, missionary to the south sea islands. "They are 'try' and 'trust.'" They are both in our pledge. Every year the West Point cadets build a pontoon bridge just as if they were in the enemy's country and had no other way of crossing the river. Endeavorers become competent church workers because of their training in church work in the Christian Endeavor society.

Mutual Benefit Column.

EDITED BY "AUNT MADGE".

Its Motto: "Helpful and Hopeful."

The purposes of this column are succinctly stated in the title and motto—it is for the mutual benefit, and aims to be helpful and hopeful. Being for the common good, it is for the common use—a public servant, a purveyor of information and suggestion, a medium for the interchange of ideas. In this capacity it solicits communications, and its success depends largely on the support given it in this respect. Communications must be signed, but the name of writer will not be printed except by permission. Communications will be subject to approval or rejection by the editor of the column, but none will be rejected without good reason. Address all communications to —Browning.

Dear M. B. Friends:

One warm day in early summer seven or eight years ago, a pleasant-faced little lady came to my door, and as I greeted her she said: "Is this Aunt Madge?" Learning it was, she introduced herself. This was my first meeting with Ernie Stine. I think at that time she had not contributed anything to the column, but she had been so interested in the letters of the nieces and the talk of a reunion, that at the noon hour, being at a hotel in town, she had walked a mile up hill facing the hot sun to see Aunt Madge personally and extend a most cordial invitation to her cottage at Contentment Cove.

This was one of the many, many thoughtful kindnesses she loved to do. The next October, in acceptance of that invitation, we gathered at the place which, ever since, has seemed like a home to us. The bright, cheerful, open fire that glowed a welcome was but the symbol of the greeting we always received as year after year we wended our various ways to the cottage. How many memory pictures we have stored in our minds of those red letter days!

What a shock we all experienced when the unexpected news came to us that her life-work was ended! Truly, we had never thought that that could be. We had accepted her gracious hospitality, and we think she knew how fully we appreciated it. Many will recall her unnumbered deeds of kindness. She was always thoughtful of others, thoughtful of their needs; thoughtful of their happiness, and to all this circle of Mutual friends and helpers she will continue to be a living reality.

Although they meet with us no more on the shores of time, we cherish a sense of their associations with us in such a way that Bea, Ego, Ruby, Novice, E. A. G., Day and now Ernie Stine, still retain a place in our column and our interests. Her last contribution was a tribute to E. A. G. printed only two weeks ago.

"Our sorrow never comes in vain,
The flowers are sweetest after rain.
The touch of grief but makes us strong
To sing a nobler, truer song."

The warm sympathies of all are extended to Mrs. Wyman's family.

For the many Easter remembrances, I wish to thank the givers, and would be glad to answer each by letter if I could. Will try to do so later.

It was a great pleasure and relief to hear from Aunt Sue. Her sunshine mottoes will appear next week, with this quotation for her (and your) old auntie shall have a place now.

"Don't tell me you are too old. Age is all imagination. Ignore years and they will ignore you."

Also the following from Oliver Wendell Holmes:

"At sixty-two life has begun;
At seventy-three begin once more;
Fly swifter as thou near'st the sun
And brighter shine at eighty-four.
At ninety-five
Should'st thou arrive,
Still wait on God and work and thrive."

Another old friend has been heard from. B. J. A. has already done some house-cleaning, and she has advanced a strong argument in favor of early spring cleaning. She says:

I thought I would try and get through this year so as to enjoy the month of June. I always manage to be into the cleaning when everything is calling, in the lovely June weather.

Well, that is really a good stimulant for beginning the spring work. I mean to profit by it.

Dear Aunt Madge and M. B. Sisters:
I'd like to know how to make a rhubarb pudding, using rhubarb and bread crumbs, and how to make the sauce for it. Will some of the sisters please send me her rule?

The past two springs I have thought I'd try to get a rhubarb pudding recipe through the column, but each spring rhubarb had given place to something else before I had made my request. So I come early in the season this year, for these warm days remind us that rhubarb and other green stuffs of the garden will soon be ready for our eating.

Well, Aunt Madge, were you not glad to hear from Aunt Emma? I was much relieved to know she had not fallen a victim to the buffalo bug nor to the sulphur fumes.

Have any of you tried C's suggestion for baking potatoes on an asbestos mat on top of the stove? I have, and think it is a fine idea. An aunt of mine gave me an additional use

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Cured Her

Knoxville, Iowa.—"I suffered with pains low down in my right side for a year or more and was so weak and nervous that I could not do my work. I wrote to Mrs. Pinkham and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, and am glad to say that your medicines and kind letters of directions have done more for me than anything else and I had the best physicians here. I can do my work and rest well at night. I believe there is nothing like the Pinkham remedies."—Mrs. CLARA FRANKS, R.F.D., No. 3, Knoxville, Iowa.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled. It may be used with perfect confidence by women who suffer from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills, and suffering women owe it to themselves to at least give this medicine a trial. Proof is abundant that it has cured thousands of others, and why should it not cure you?

If you want special advice write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for it. It is free and always helpful.

For the mat—to toast bread on it. The bread comes off a rich brown.

Will someone kindly tell me how to make rye bread? This is my recipe for RYE BREAD.—One cup rye meal, one cup flour, one cup sour milk, one-quarter cup molasses, one teaspoon soda, salt. Bake in quick oven in heated gem pan.

I hope some of you will answer D's inquiries promptly so that the rhubarb recipes may be made use of this spring. Thanks for your letter, D. Come again.

PARADISE, CAL., March 18, 1910.

Dear Aunt Madge:—
Last evening we had a downpour of rain in big drops for a few minutes; consequently, this bright sunny morning Nature's gems of every kind and hue sparkle in the sunlight with dazzling brilliancy.

Aunt Nellie and I rode through cross streets, into byways and along hedgerows, out into nearby suburbs of the city, where we could gather poppies, of which aunt is so fond and over which she enthuses so much.

I wish you and all the Mutuels could go with me into my garden this minute, to see what you think of it. The vegetables are coming right along, sure. Peas making pod, and there are plenty in the market at 10 cents a pound. We had a nice mess for our dinner. O! and they were so sweet!

My cucumbers are up and my oranges on the trees look like great balls of gold. I wish I could fill your peck basket with them. I know you would enjoy looking at and eating them. Probably you would adorn your mantel with some of the biggest of them.

—SUSAN.

All we can say to you in regard to our side of the continent is that there is no snow on the ground at this date, April 1, and the sap is flowing in the maples and the spring birds, like robins and sparrows, have arrived, and so we have some evidences of spring. AUNT MADGE.

Silver Threads Amongst the Gold

"Darling, I am growing old, silver threads amongst the gold shine upon my brow to-day, life is fading fast away." Thus runs one of the old, old songs. There is always a note of sadness and regret attached to the coming of gray hair prematurely, as if the hand of time were ruthlessly checking off the pleasant hours of youth and laughter. Remedy after remedy has been exploited for the restoring of gray hair to its natural color, but the one that has stood the test of years and proved the most pleasant and reliable, is HAY'S HAIR HEALTH. This time-tried preparation succeeds where others fail. It is one of these safe and dependable remedies that it is a pleasure to recommend. HAY'S HAIR HEALTH restores gray hair by furnishing to the hair roots the exact nourishment that revives and gives them new life and vigor. It is not a dye. It works pleasantly and effectively. All reliable druggists sell it for 50c. and a dollar. Booklet containing further information on the "Care of the Hair" will be forwarded for 2c. by Philo Hay Specialties Co., 30 Clinton St., Newark, N. J., U. S. A.

OLD BLUEHILL
DAYS AND WAYS.

[A Bluehill "reunion" was held in Boston on Saturday, Feb. 12. A brief report of the affair appeared in the Feb. 12 issue of THE AMERICAN. The following paper by Mrs. Caroline Hinckley Stone, was read. Until now it has been impossible for THE AMERICAN to fulfill its promise that the paper should appear "at an early date."—Ed.]

And so the Bluehill reunion is "on" again, and to-night we greet the dear old friends, the faces so familiar to us—those who are left.

These two functions of eastern Maine—of Bluehill and Ellsworth—have become an established and settled institution each winter in the city of our adoption. We of Bluehill make up in quality what we lack in quantity. Ellsworth always did outrank us in size and numbers, but never in any other desirable quality.

I wonder do the descendants of the Ellsworth folk whom I knew so well in the days that are gone, come to Paul Revere hall to assist in their merry-making? If so, I should be tempted to avail myself of the invitation extended to all natives of Hancock county, and make one of the company that will soon assemble there. Ellsworth has always been closely allied to Bluehill.

How many of us remember the American house under the able management of Mine Host Tinker? "Court week" was something worth while in those palmy days. It was my good fortune to be in the charmed circle of the law then. Many a time have I driven over with my father when he went to make one of the company of solons who gathered in the courthouse on the hill.

Well do I remember the enthusiastic reception we always received as we drove up to the broad piazza of the hospitable hostelry. At once the doors flew open, and out rushed Ben—(everybody knew Ben) all bows and smiles. We were landed with as much empressment and ceremony as if we were of the blood royal, and escorted to the parlor at the right of the entrance. In the winter there was always a glowing fire in the open grate, so comfortable after our long ride.

Getting warmed and rested, the next thing was to find Mrs. Tinker. We had to seek her in the domestic regions, for she "looked well to the ways of her household," and great doings were going on in the hotel kitchen during this, the great week of the year. Never, however, was she too busy to be prevented from giving a cheery welcome to me whom she had known from a child as "Squire Hinckley's little girl".

Then there were the four daughters of the house, celebrated for their beauty even in that locality where pretty girls were the rule rather than the exception. Never, in later years, have I seen occasion to change my then childish opinion that they were the handsomest girls I had ever seen or ever expected to see.

Then came dinner, and such a dinner! No French chef of the present degenerate times could hope to attain such perfection. Soup, before whose appetizing flavor Julien and Campbell would hide their diminished heads. And the turkey! Roasted to the exact approved shade of crisp brown, and fragrant with delicious stuffing; gravies, vegetables and all accessories unparalleled!

Then mince pie, squash pie, apple pie, pumpkin pie, custard pie and plum pudding! Oh, did the unlucky wight who took the whole business suffer the agonies of dyspepsia in those days? I can answer for myself—no, and again no; for nothing could have tempted me to forego the delight of sampling every one of Mrs. Tinker's pies and the pudding as well.

And now, just here let me bear witness to the perfection of the four best-known hotels of Hancock county as they were in their palmy days—the Robinson house in Bucksport, under the lengthy stewardship of Mr. Moses; the American house in Ellsworth, managed as I have so imperfectly described; the Bluehill house, with the late Mrs. Hinckley of beloved memory in efficient charge, and the Travellers' Home in Sedgwick, when the Doritys, father and son, and their wives, made it a home indeed to all who entered its hospitable doors.

What if there were not so much of style and show as obtains nowadays? The essential requirements were all there—a warm welcome, a comfortable room, a first-class meal. The travelling public will go far before they will now find such a quartet.

I remember some of the "knights of the green bag" who used to gather around Mine Host Tinker's festive board. There was the dignified Charles Abbott and Hezekiah Williams, of Castine; Judge Tuck, of Bucksport, probate judge in Hancock county for forty years, a gentleman in every sense of the word; Mr. Robinson, of Ellsworth, of whom it was said, "he was a good lawyer and an excellent citizen"; Mr. Wiswell, father of the late lamented chief-justice; George S. Peters and George Herbert, also residents of Ellsworth; Arthur F. Drinkwater, judge of the municipal court and editor of THE AMERICAN from 1872 to 1878; Charles Lowell, Ellsworth's editor, merchant, character; the stately Theodore Woodman, who, my informant says, "settled in Bucksport as a reliable lawyer and continued so through life"; Judge Cunningham and Charles Spoford; then there was my own father, who died at the age of sixty-six, and I can remember when he seemed, to my childish mind, older than a centennarian now would.

All these, and many more who have passed off life's stage, formed the really able contingent of the lawyers of eastern Maine. Ellsworth and Bluehill had still another bond of sympathy in that "man of God", "Saint" Tenney, who hardly knew which town he did belong to, so loved and revered was he in both. His work for a later generation was like

WATCH FOR THE COMET.
The Red Dragon of the sky. Watch for children for spring coughs and colds. Of the fulfurling keep Polley's Honey and Tonic. It is the best and safest promotion and cure for cough and cold. Contains no opiates or harmful drugs from substitutes. G. A. PARCHEE.

Father Fisher's for an earlier one, and who can calculate the influences for good that have come down through the years to us from the lives of those two old-time clergymen.

In one respect Ellsworth is now far and away ahead of Bluehill, in its well-supported and energetically carried on Village Improvement society. I am told that since its inauguration the beautiful city fairly shines with neatness and order. Now, Bluehill homes and the grounds surrounding them are almost without an exception kept in an irreproachable state. I remember the last time that I was in my native town, stopping often to admire the grassy terraces and closely-cropped lawns that surround the town hall; they were beautiful, a credit alike to the janitor and to the town.

But directly across the street, the vacant lot between the old Fisk mansion (called now, I believe, the Exchange) and the house above, was a howling wilderness of tangled weeds and a vigorous growth of burdocks; it seemed to be a hospital for all the superannuated and dilapidated vehicles that could be mustered, and a convenient dumping-place for refuse. And this in the very heart of the village.

Who is responsible for the abatement of such abuses? Is it a case of what is everybody's business is nobody's? It seems as if the summer residents who pay so large a proportion of the town taxes should be considered in matters like this, and a small part, at least, of their money, be expended in removing such abominations.

How many of my friends present this evening remember the first steamboat that made her appearance in our waters? Should Uncle Sam's entire white squadron drop anchor between Long Island and the Neck some bright morning, it would not create half the sensation that did the arrival of the little side-wheeler T. F. Secor, in those primitive days.

There was no wharf for her accommodation, and rather than brave the unknown dangers of the "Narrows" and the "Middle" ground, her complement of passengers and freight was delivered in boats off the "Harding Shore". Every mother's son and daughter among the children were on hand to assist that never-to-be-forgotten morning, you may be sure. What mattered it that we had footed it all the way from the village; a few miles more or less, was as nothing to us. I recollect that my running-mate on this gala occasion was the present dignified designer of the Boston court-house, and he got over the ground with more celerity because he was not hampered by the unnecessary impedimenta of shoes and stockings.

In those long-ago times there was not a fruit-store or stall at every street corner. Occasionally some vessel returning from the West Indies would bring, among her miscellaneous cargo, sundry mysterious-looking earthen jars containing preserved tamarinds, and also a few cases of very small and very sour oranges, and I have vivid recollections of the oriental-looking boxes of guava jelly. Bananas were unheard of.

The apple orchards of the town, being with one exception—that of long-suffering Uncle George Stevens—very young, hardly come to a bearing state, one did not, so far as the fruit question was concerned, measure up to the privileges of the present-day child. However, this unfortunate state had an occasional mitigation when a trader took us by storm. As I remember them, they were a kind of floating junk-shop which brought to us children the most wonderful things, "as they sailed, as they sailed," and their annual arrival at the town wharf was an epoch in the lives of every one of us. Such oranges and Boston apples; such figs, dates and nuts; candies, the like of which Huyler never dreamed of—old-fashioned sticks most gorgeously striped; "gooseberries" and "Gibraltars" and funny little red and white peppermint hearts, and strangest of all, these delectable delicacies were delivered to us "without money and without price" so far as the "coin of the realm" was concerned; all that was asked in return was a specified weight in old iron and "sich".

We began as soon as the vessel passed through the "narrows" on her out-bound passage to save up for the next year, and our wealth among our comrades was estimated by the size of our pile of junk. Small wonder that fathers and mothers hunted long and fruitlessly for the missing household hardware long after the "trader" sailed away.

The "little bay" is full of rocks and shoals. A friend of mine says of it: "That is a deceitful little bay, just like some people—all fair and smiling, and planning to trip you up or run you aground at any minute." There is great danger, unless one keeps a steady head and hand, of running, in local parlance, "right slap bang onto the triangles"; many the expedition that has come to grief on the triangles or the half-tide ledge.

One of my earliest recollections is of trotting down street, tight hold of my father's hand, on an occasion, and meeting one of our local "Cap'n Cutties" who greeted him in this wise [prefacing his information with a saline ejaculation]; "Wa'al, 'Squire, there's Capt. Stene [Capt. Norton] and 'Armbus' [Ambrose Stover] have histed the Zodiac high and dry on the half-tide ledge, and she a roostin' there yet, b'gosh!" Father was supposed to be an interested party, as he was the fortunate possessor of a sixteenth or an eighteenth or some part into which such craft was divisible.

Owners' meetings were called semi-occasionally and religiously attended, but I never heard of any one's worldly wealth being materially increased thereby. One curious thing was the invariable delay in the always caused among our local sons of Neptune when they happened to the "other feller". The unlucky wight who was hung up on the triangles was always the butt of all the rest, who seemed to be oblivious to the fact that a similar fate was sure to overtake the last one of them sooner or later in the course of their navigating.

SLEEP OF GOOD HEALTH.
Live power of sound sleep can be attained, and any ailment that is a menace to health. T. L. Clair, Wis., says: "For a long time I was unable to sleep soundly on account of pains across my back and kidneys. My appetite was much improved. I have been taking Polley's Kidney and Bladder Pills. I eat and enjoy my meals. My condition is greatly improved. I recommend Polley's Kidney Pills they have cured me." G. A. PARCHEE.

Because our homes were far from the centers of "society", do not for a moment believe that we did not have our recreations. Several times in the summer, after having was over and the powers that were could turn their attention to lesser matters, some schooner that happened to be in the harbor was chartered; a general invitation was issued and nearly the entire community would start for a day's sail, leaving behind only those who, were superannuated or those who, from a chronic disposition to sea-sickness, felt "discretion to be the better part of valor". It was usually the Merchant or the Massasoit, with kindly "Capt. Luther" at the helm, that took us down to Long Island, where the fish were only too glad to be caught; where clams were to be had for the digging, and the moss-covered ledges were blue with berries.

Mrs. Herrick, of Bethel, who has written the most delightful reminiscences of Bluehill that it has been my happy fortune to read, says of these expeditions: "I never expect to experience anything so delightful as those cruises. We used to go through the narrows away out into the big bay, and land usually on Long Island to have dinner. One could not come in our larger craft very near the beach, so had to be set ashore in small boats; that was wildly exciting! There was a deep sense of responsibility if one's father was at the helm. The old sea-dogs used to chaff each other about the management of the craft, and I never felt comfortably sure how much of it was fun.

Once "she" careened so shockingly that the picnic baskets all rolled down to the starboard side and water broke in over the rail upon them. One good lady declared with tears that she wished she had never left the washtub. Of course, in my fright, she got a little mixed. No woman in good and regular standing ever washed on any day but Monday, and in an orthodox community no pleasure excursion was ever planned for a day set apart to those sacred rites. But I did not stop to analyze, and her wild lament sent terror to my soul."

I have a vivid recollection of this same voyage—for you may be sure I was there—and to this day I remember how I held on with a grasp of desperation to a spoke of the wheel where Capt. Meliah Chase was steering. I remember, too, when the flurry was over, his saying to me, with an unmistakable twinkle of the eye: "Scared, Carrie?" Scared! I wonder that I ever again mustered courage to dare the dangers of the mighty deep! And the light of matured years and knowledge and that twinkle make me question whether it was entirely an off-shore wind which laid us so unceremoniously upon our beam ends that day!

Then came the picnic dinner under the trees bordering the smooth, white beach. Will any caterer in this broad land ever be able to set forth such viands as were brought proudly out from the Indian baskets and bright tin pails? And could any fish chowder measure up to those concocted by "Uncle Lotte"? And as for clam-bakes! Those even of Providence, R. I., where they originated, could not be thought of, even in the same day with those presided over by Mr. Newton and Fred Stevens. Such coffee as was brewed over the blazing camp-fire! Its aroma comes down to me through the long years that intervene.

And the folks, the friends and neighbors; every face is pictured on my memory sharp and clear-cut as a cameo. After the luncheon, and everybody had had some of everybody else's, and the fragments gathered up, then came the fun. The songs that were sung, the stories that were told, and the jokes that went around! What matter if the flavor was a little chest-nutty? They called forth the laugh just the same; laughs came easily then. We had our acknowledged wags. Was there ever such another Tom as Tom Hinckley, with a wit as sharp as a razor? And on the feminine side was Aunt Emma Chase, who was no whit behind him. When those two measured repartee it was worth being there to hear.

I wish I had time to speak of all our town characters; they were legion. There were Ben and Job Clough, father and son, wood sawers in ordinary to the entire community. I can see Ben now trudging by after his day's work with his bag of flour on his back; he never got together the wherewithal to pay for an entire barrel at a time. He was like the wandering Jew in his travels, and must have walked the distance around the world many times between the village and his home near the "mines".

We all have a vivid recollection of Seth Trundy. His place of abode was in Surry, I think, but he had adopted us, and his appearance in our streets was the signal for the gathering of the clans among the boys and girls. He never failed to put in an appearance at the vestry door after one of those never-to-be-forgotten tea parties that obtained in the days when our mothers and grandmothers were raising the money to pay for the church organ. He was a regular dumping ground for all the broken food that was left, and it was religiously kept for him. His gastronomic feats are told of to this day. George Clough says that Seth once, on a bet, devoured twelve dozen eggs at a sitting, and asked for more. A mercy that they were only ten cents per dozen instead of fifty, or the town would have been bankrupt.

John Clay, when he came down from his home in the "kingdom" to assist at any domestic rites, was as thirsty as Seth was hungry, and the housewives always got out their biggest coffee and teapots when he appeared. Hot and strong, and lots of it, suited him.

Nervous prostration was an unheard-of complaint in those days, when everybody sailed on an even keel.

I might go on all night and then not tell the half, but I fear that I have already exceeded my allotted time and exhausted your patience. However, let me just add to my list of notables the name of "Clem" Walls. Clem's mental powers were not as well developed as his friends could have wished, but, without being in the least aware of it, he often "hit the nail square on the head". A young man from the city, who was suffering in an alarming degree from the complaint we now call "big-head", and who, in his own estimation, "knew it all", struck our town one summer, and his salutation to Clem was: "Well, Clem, what is the matter with you, anyway?" Quick as a flash came the reply: "Hoss kicked me; what kicked you?"

But little more and I am done. I cannot forget the bright days passed in the old academy. The faces of our teachers come up before me and their voices still sound in my ears. The spelling matches and the debating societies—they have all faded away into the past! I cannot pass over the mention of the winter evenings when the coasting was at its best, and we would all betake ourselves to the summit of the "doctor's". Starting where the four corners meet, near where the (former) Bluehill Inn now stands, we flew like meteors down through the village and across the bridge, bringing up near the foot of Green's hill on the other side.

The delights of skating on the glassy surface of the frozen bay! Then occasionally, when the spirit moved us, the whole troop would elect to start in the most unceremonious manner for the "eastward", the full moon flooding the snow, and the stars like diamond points above us. No matter how many there were we did ever fail of a warm welcome from hospitable "Sunday Varnum" and Aunt Lucy and the boys. No doughnuts that I have ever tasted since ever equalled those brought out in a big, bright tin pail piled up and overflowing with the spicy fragrance.

Now, in my occasional sojournings in the old town, of a Sunday in church, when the good parson is rounding out his sonorous periods, my wits go wool gathering (more shame to me), and I look around on the familiar pews, now for the most part occupied by strangers, and people them once again with those who sat there in the years that are gone. God-fearing and self-respecting folk they indeed were; there can be no improvement upon them, and we their descendants can look back upon them with pride and thankfulness that we sprang from such staunch New England stock.

I love to think of them all "after life's fitful fever" resting together in that more populous village which slopes down to the sea. Few remain of those who made, to many of us, the life of other years; change is written everywhere. But two familiar features remain just as they were in the long ago—the blue waters of the bay sparkle as brightly and tides ebb and flow as they did in our childhood, and "old Blue hill", unchanged, still looks down in welcome to each returning son and daughter.

KITTELY TO CARIBOU.

Michael Mushrol, an employee of the Great Northern Paper Co., at Madison, sacrificed his own life last Wednesday to save that of a fellow employee. A stick of dynamite had been prepared to loosen a huge pile of pulp logs in the mill yard, and the fuse had been lighted when Mushrol noticed the yard team and driver had not left the danger zone. He grabbed the dynamite stick, intending to throw it to one side, when the cap exploded, blowing off both his hands and severely injuring the side of his head. Mushrol died three hours later. CITY MEETING.

BUDGET OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR YEAR PASSED.

INCREASED PAY FOR FIREMEN—CHANGE IN SCHOOL BOARD—ROLLS OF ACCOUNTS.

The city government held two meetings in one Monday evening—a recessed meeting of the annual meeting, and the regular April meeting. The full board was present, Ald. George A. Parcher being in his seat for the first time. He was sworn in at the opening of the meeting.

When the budget of appropriations was taken up for final action, Street Commissioner Hurley made an appeal for a small appropriation for the State road work. He said there was a bad place between the point where the State road work of last year at Ellsworth Falls ended and the Bangor bridge. He suggested an appropriation of $400.

Ald. Hagan favored such an appropriation. Ald. Small said he had no objection if the work stopped when the appropriation was exhausted, instead of continuing the work far beyond the appropriation. An appropriation of $400 was decided upon.

APPROPRIATIONS.

The budget of appropriations was then given its two readings and passed.

"For years I have doctored for acute gastritis, but only received slight benefit, and had to be careful what I ate. But, thanks to Mi-o-na stomach tablets, I can now eat anything. Last Christmas, after partaking of a hearty turkey dinner, I was seized with an attack of acute indigestion, and the doctor worked over me for hours before I got relief. He paid me eight visits before I could say I was well enough to sit up. But since then I have taken Mi-o-na tablets, and I have not been troubled since. Before using Mi-o-na I had attacks about every month." Mrs. Ida Griffith, 1213 C St., Washington, D. D., July 5, 1909.

For Catarrh.

Medicine Free in Every Case Where It Fails to Relieve.

Neglect or pessimism, we believe, is the greatest enemy the public has to contend with when applied to the loss or recovery of health. Practically every case of consumption might have been cured if hope had been maintained and proper treatment had been resorted to at the first symptom of the disease. Until the advanced stage is reached, consumption is curable. Catarrh is responsible, we believe, for many cases of consumption. It is about catarrh we want to talk to you to-day, incidentally consumption, since the two are so closely allied.
We have a medicine made from a prescription of one of the most successful catarrh specialists known. We believe it is positively without an equal. We are so satisfied that we are right that we will supply the medicine free in every instance where it is used according to directions for a reasonable length of time, should it fail to give satisfaction in every particular. We want every one to try this medicine at our risk. There are no conditions attached to our offer. We put the user under no obligation to us whatever.
The medicine we want you to try is Rexall Mucu-Tone. It is a catarrh remedy that goes direct to the seat of trouble. It is carried by the blood to every part of the system. It purifies and enriches the blood, tones up the mucous cells and brings about a condition of health and strength that tends to prevent the germs of consumption from getting a start. Besides this, Rexall Mucu-Tone is a wonderful appetizer, digestive aid and flesh-builder. Its good effects are often felt from the very first dose. It is one of the largest and most satisfactory selling medicines that we have ever had anything to do with.
We know so much of the great good that it has done that we personally back it up with our reputation and money, which fact should be ample guarantee to satisfy anybody. Rexall Mucu-Tone comes in two sizes, 50 cents and $1.00. We urge you to try it. Remember you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Ellsworth only at our store—The Rexall Store. E. G. MOORE, cor. opp. postoffice.

thoughtfully remembered by the Juniors. The kindness of the children appealed to them in a touching manner, and they expressed their appreciation in this way. Other "shut-ins" have been remembered by the league through little deeds of kindness.

OBITUARY.

The angel of death has again visited our town, this time claiming as its victim Blanche Grant, wife of Robert Petrie. Mrs. Petrie was a native of Kilburne, N. B., and came here as a bride. Six children were born to them, three of whom are living. All that kind relatives and friends could do was done, but of no avail, and on Monday last she fell asleep, realizing that all was well.
Deceased was a member of the Methodist church and of Companion court, and was buried under the full rites of the order on Wednesday, March 30. Rev. C. A. Purdy spoke words of consolation to the bereaved ones. Favorite hymns of the deceased were sung: "Going Home," "Rock of Ages" and "No, Not One." Beautiful flowers from friends and the orders were in evidence bearing their message of love and esteem. Interment was in the family lot.
When we leave this world of changes,
When we leave this world of care,
We shall find our missing loved ones
In our Father's mansion fair.

Mr. J. W. Pritchard, Columbia City, Ind., writes: "I have been cured of catarrh of the stomach by Peruna. I could hardly eat anything that agreed with me. Not a Drop of Alcohol

What is a "tonic"? A medicine that increases the strength or tone of the whole system. What is an "alterative"? A medicine that alters or changes unhealthy action to healthy action. Name the best "tonic and alterative"? Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the only Sarsaparilla entirely free from alcohol. Ask your own doctor all about it. Never take a medicine doctors cannot endorse. J.C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

Without daily action of the bowels poisonous products must be absorbed. Then you have impure blood, biliousness, headache. Ask your doctor about Ayer's Pills for constipation.

Why Suffer Indigestion's? Awful Pain?
